

DESIGN

An array of pointers is created which points to a node containing price and item name.

Each element in the array is the hotel id

Each element is actually a pointer to linked list which stores the price and name of the item

So we have an array which has a linked list attached to every element.

